

Valued Stakeholder,

We have made an important decision at Redwire Space that I believe will enable us to serve our customers, partners, and the space industry at large in a more robust and enduring way. Today, we announced we are entering into a definitive merger with Genesis Park Acquisition Corp. (NYSE: GNPX) (“Genesis Park”), a publicly traded special purpose acquisition company, that will result in Redwire becoming a publicly traded company. The transaction is expected to be completed by the end of the second quarter of 2021, and at that time, Genesis Park will change its name to Redwire and we will trade on the NYSE.

At Redwire, we build above. Whether we are supporting national security, civil, or commercial space missions through our essential spacecraft components, contributing to a growing low Earth economy through innovative product development on the International Space Station, or revolutionizing spacecraft architecture through robotic manufacturing and assembly on orbit, we are providing tools that will unlock the next golden age of space exploration. Through this merger announcement, Redwire will scale its innovation ecosystem, further solidifying our position as the mission partner of choice and accelerating development of the next generation of space infrastructure.

We believe the future of space exploration will be defined by transformational technologies that enable new capabilities on orbit, open new markets for economic expansion, and provide a sustainable future for humanity beyond low Earth orbit. Over the last year, Redwire has aligned the talent and technology necessary to deliver on our mission—accelerating humanity’s expansion in space—in unprecedented ways. We are grateful for your support, and we look forward to working alongside you as we create new opportunities for humankind both on and off planet.

Sincerely,

Forward Looking Statements

This document includes “forward looking statements” within the meaning of the “safe harbor” provisions of the United States Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995. Forward-looking statements may be identified by the use of words such as “forecast,” “intend,” “seek,” “target,” “anticipate,” “believe,” “expect,” “estimate,” “plan,” “outlook,” and “project” and other similar expressions that predict or indicate future events or trends or that are not statements of historical matters. Such forward looking statements include estimated financial information, including without limitation, forecasted revenue and revenue CAGR. Such forward looking statements with respect to revenues, earnings, performance, strategies, prospects and other aspects of the businesses of Genesis Park Acquisition Corp., Redwire or the combined company after completion of the Business Combination are based on current expectations that are subject to risks and uncertainties. A number of factors could cause actual results or outcomes to differ materially from those indicated by such forward looking statements. These factors include, but are not limited to: (1) the occurrence of any event, change or other circumstances that could give rise to the termination of the merger agreement governing the proposed business combination; (2) the inability to complete the transactions contemplated by the merger agreement due to the failure to obtain approval of the shareholders of Genesis Park Acquisition Corp. or other conditions to closing in the merger agreement; (3) the ability to meet NYSE’s listing standards following the consummation of the transactions contemplated by the merger agreement; (4) the risk that the proposed transaction disrupts current plans and operations of Redwire as a result of the announcement and consummation of the transactions described herein; (5) the ability to recognize the anticipated benefits of the proposed business combination, which may be affected by, among other things, competition, the ability of the combined company to grow and manage growth profitably, maintain relationships with customers and suppliers and retain its management and key employees; (6) costs related to the proposed business combination; (7) changes in applicable laws or regulations; (8) the possibility that Redwire may be adversely affected by other economic, business, and/or competitive factors; and (9) other risks and uncertainties indicated from time to time in other documents filed or to be filed with the SEC by Genesis Park Acquisition Corp. You are cautioned not to place undue reliance upon any forward-looking statements, which speak only as of the date made. Genesis Park Acquisition Corp. and Redwire undertake no commitment to update or revise the forward-looking statements, whether as a result of new information, future events or otherwise, except as may be required by law.
