July 9, 2021

This laboratory, orbiting above, has redefined what it means to live and work in space.

At Redwire, we build the innovations that enable success for our partners.

In 2017, our teams successfully showcased a first-of-its-kind technology called the Roll Out Solar Array structure – a strong, compact and efficient solution for deploying arrays on a flexible blanket without motors or complex mechanisms.

Now Redwire’s patented ROSA technology will deploy six Boeing Spectrolab solar arrays on the International Space Station. Collectively these will provide an additional one hundred twenty kilowatts of power... A twenty to thirty percent boost that will power bold new science and technology demonstrations, like Redwire’s many in-space manufacturing payloads, for years to come.

With the Station prepped and ready, the first two iROSA arrays will launch aboard SpaceX’s twenty-second commercial resupply mission and be installed by NASA astronauts. The remaining four iROSA arrays will be deployed over two additional missions in 2022.

Because ROSA provides unparalleled, highly modular power generation in an affordable compact solution, designs are in development for use on NASA’s Artemis Gateway, with Commercial and Civil missions on the lunar surface and for use in deep space on NASA’s DART mission.

ROSA is just one of Redwire’s capabilities that will accelerate humanity’s expansion into space and deliver on our promise to be the mission partner of choice for those who lead the way.

At Redwire, we Build Above.

Forward Looking Statements

This document includes “forward looking statements” within the meaning of the “safe harbor” provisions of the United States Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995. Forward-looking statements may be identified by the use of words such as “forecast,” “intend,” “seek,” “target,” “anticipate,” “believe,” “expect,” “estimate,” “plan,” “outlook,” and “project” and other similar expressions that predict or indicate future events or trends or that are not statements of historical matters. Such forward looking statements with respect to revenues, earnings, performance, strategies, prospects and other aspects of the businesses of Genesis Park Acquisition Corp., Redwire or the combined company after completion of the Business Combination are based on current expectations that are subject to risks and uncertainties.

A number of factors could cause actual results or outcomes to differ materially from those indicated by such forward looking statements. These factors include, but are not limited to: (1) the occurrence of any event, change or other circumstances that could give rise to the termination of the merger agreement governing the proposed business combination; (2) the inability to complete the transactions contemplated by the merger agreement due to the failure to obtain approval of the shareholders of Genesis Park Acquisition Corp. or other conditions to closing in the merger agreement; (3) the ability to meet NYSE's listing standards following the consummation of the transactions contemplated by the merger agreement; (4) the risk that the proposed transaction disrupts current plans and operations of Redwire as a result of the announcement and consummation of the transactions described herein; (5) the ability to recognize the anticipated benefits of the proposed business combination, which may be affected by, among other things, competition, the ability of the combined company to grow and manage growth profitably, maintain relationships with customers and suppliers and retain its management and key employees; (6) costs related to the proposed business combination; (7) changes in applicable laws or regulations; (8) the possibility that Redwire may be adversely affected by other economic, business, and/or competitive factors; and (9) other risks and uncertainties indicated from time to time in other documents filed or to be filed with the SEC by Genesis Park Acquisition Corp. You are cautioned not to place undue reliance upon any forward-looking statements, which speak only as of the date made. Genesis Park Acquisition Corp. and Redwire undertake no commitment to update or revise the forward-looking statements, whether as a result of new information, future events or otherwise, except as may be required by law.
